United States Department of Agriculture Bureau of Markets FOOD SURVEYS Published by Authority of the Secretary of Agriculture

WASHINGTON, D. C.

FEBRUARY 20, 1919—SPECIAL ISSUE.

VOL. II, No. 17

ANNOUNCEMENT.—In accordance with the provisions contained in Section 2 of an Act of Congress (Public No. 50, 65th Congress) approved August 10, 1917, the Chief of the Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture has been authorized and instructed, as an agent of the Secretary of Agriculture, to take such steps as may be necessary to obtain authoritative information regarding the matters authorized to be investigated under that section.

The Food Surveys Project has been established pursuant to Sections 2 and 8, of the Act, to obtain such information concerning food and food materials as may seem necessary or desirable for the guidance of governmental agencies and the public in making plans for increasing production, for promoting efficient distribution, and for directing conservation and utilization.

The results of the surveys made under this Project will be published monthly in "Food Surveys," which will be mailed from Washington, D. C., between the fifteenth and twentieth of each month. Special numbers of "Food Surveys" will be issued from time to time as occasion may require. A copy may be obtained on application to "Food Surveys," Bureau of Markets, Room 229, Homer Building, Washington, D. C.

STOCKS OF FOODSTUFFS IN THE HANDS OF RETAIL DEALERS

In the Food Survey of July 1, 1918, schedules were obtained from retail dealers as well as from other commercial concerns having stocks of foodstuffs. The schedules relating to stocks held by manufacturers, storage establishments, and wholesale dealers were segregated for immediate tabulation. A preliminary report* on these stocks was issued under date of July 29, and the final reports were published in a series of special issues† of "Food Surveys," running from August 31 to October 5.

The tabulation of the larger stocks being more urgent, the work on the retail schedules has been carried on in the intervals between the periods required for the tabulation of the monthly reports, and at other times when it could be accomplished without the employment of a special force. With the United States totals for stocks other than retail for comparison, the data herewith submitted will be of statistical value in a number of ways.

An important purpose to be served by these retail figures is to show the relation between retail stocks and wholesale stocks, or to show what part of the total commercial stocks were in the hands of retail dealers. This relation is shown on a percentage basis in Table 1. Similar information for stocks on January 1, 1918, was already available from the Survey of that date, but a comparison of the percentages for July 1, and January 1, as they are given in the last two columns of Table 1, reveals marked differences. The reasons for these differences will appear, in a majority of cases, when consideration is given to the season during which stocks are rapidly accumulated, the time of year when retail demand is greatest, and other factors.

With the aid of the figures for retail stocks presented herewith, it has been possible to determine the total commercial stocks and also the comparative changes in the total stocks. Having these figures, the comparative holdings of certain important classes of business previously ascertained can be compared with the total holdings. Thus one significant use that may be made of the figures for retail stocks is in ascertaining how far the holdings of certain important classes of business reflect the status of the total commercial holdings.

Tables are given in the latter part of this report showing retail stocks by geographic divisions and states. These tables, taken in connection with the figures already published for stocks other than retail, and for stocks on January 1, 1918,‡ make possible many valuable comparisons, both between the retail stocks in different sections of the country and between the stocks of retail dealers and those held by other classes of business in different divisions or in individual states.

The principal classes of retail dealers from whom reports were obtained were as follows: Retail grain dealers, retail grocers (including chain stores), general stores, and retail meat markets. Schedules were also received from retail bakers and retail confectioners, though the returns from the latter class were far from complete, as it was found impracticable to secure reports from the numerous small candy shops scattered throughout the country.

For the sake of convenience in presenting the material in condensed tables, the designations used on the schedules for certain commodities have been considerably abbreviated. The full designations are given below for all commodities where the shorter form is less definite than the longer form.

Grain sorghums—kafir, milo, etc.
Beans, dry, edible—all kinds.
Peas and lentils (including all dry peas except cowpeas).
Miscellaneous wheat food products—wheat breakfast foods, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, etc.
Corn meal suitable for human food.
Miscellaneous corn food products—hominy, grits, corn breakfast foods, etc.
Rice, cleaned or milled.
Rolled oats and oatmeal.
Bakery products—bread, crackers, cakes, wafers, etc.
Salted and cured beef—including pickled, corned, dried, etc.
Cured hams, bacon, and shoulders, sweet-pickled, dry-salted, or smoked.
Other cured and salted pork.
Dried fish—dry-salted, smoked, etc.
Lard compounds and lard substitutes (excluding purely vegetable substitutes).
Solid vegetable cooking fats (labels will indicate whether vegetable or not).
Oleo stock, oleo oil, and edible tallow.
Cottonseed oil, excluding any not suitable for human food.
Dried eggs and egg albumen.
Dried milk and milk powder.
Canned meat, including canned sausage and canned poultry.
Miscellaneous canned vegetables—string beans, lima beans, pumpkin, asparagus, etc.
Preserves, marmalades, jellies, crushed fruits, and fruit sirups.
Raisins, currants, figs, and dates.
Miscellaneous dried or evaporated fruits and berries.
Sirup—cane, sorghum, corn, maple, etc.
Molasses, excluding any not suitable for human food.
Tapioca, sago, cornstarch, and other food starches.

Table 1 shows the total stocks reported in the Survey of July 1, 1918, with separate figures for retail stocks and stocks other than retail—those reported by manufacturers, storage establishments, and wholesale dealers. The table also shows the percentage which the retail stocks represented of the total stocks reported for July 1, 1918, and the corresponding percentage for the stocks reported in the Survey of January 1, 1918. The considerable differences which may be noted between the figures in the two percentage columns represent, in general, differences in conditions at the two seasons of the year represented by January 1 and July 1.

The percentages of the total stocks on July 1, 1918, which were reported by retail dealers are also shown in graphic form in Diagram 1.

It may be noted that many of the commodities for which large percentages of the total stocks were reported in the hands of retail dealers are the standard, non-perishable commodities usually found in the stock of every retail grocer or general store. Among these might be mentioned the different kinds of flour, corn meal, rice, rolled oats, and canned goods.

The retail percentages shown for July 1 for canned tomatoes and canned corn, two varieties of canned goods whose production is necessarily limited to the latter part of the summer and early fall, are considerably larger than the percentages shown for January 1. This is doubtless due in part to the fact that the accumulated output of the previous season formed a large reserve stock, most of which would be in the hands of non-retail concerns on January 1, which reserve would be greatly reduced by the first of the following July. The stocks reported by the canners, for example, which were relatively large on January 1, 1918, represented on July 1 only a small fraction of the figure given for January.

Very small percentages are shown in the table for some of the items because these commodities are not sold at retail to any great extent. Examples of this class are oleo stock, peanut oil, and cottonseed oil.

Other commodities showing relatively small retail holdings are such semi-perishable commodities as butter, eggs, and cheese, of which the large reserve stocks are held in cold storage establishments.

Table 2 gives the number of firms reporting each commodity, classified as retail and other than retail, with the percentage which the retail firms represented of the total number.

* Detailed information with regard to these stocks has been published in "Food Surveys," Vol II, Nos 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, and 12.

Table 3 shows the distribution of the stocks reported among the several classes of retail dealers, for all of the commodities for which important stocks were reported by two or more classes. For wheat and the other grains the major part of the retail stocks were reported by the retail grain dealers, and most of the remainder by the general stores. For oleo stock, peanut oil, dried eggs, and dried milk, the other commodities omitted from this table, the retail stocks as a whole were unimportant.

The classes of retail dealers are as follows: Retail grocers, general stores, retail grain dealers, retail meat markets, and a class designated "Other retail dealers." The last-named class comprises retail bakers and confectioners, and for many commodities includes either retail grain dealers or retail meat markets, or both, where the stocks reported by these classes were too small to be significant by themselves. With regard to the two classes first mentioned it may be said that most of the firms classified as retail grocers are located in cities or large towns, while most of the general stores are located in the country or in smaller towns. One important exception to this last statement appears in the case of the large mail order houses, which are classified as general stores and whose stocks, especially in Chicago, represent considerable quantities.

For most commodities the total stocks reported for the United States by the retail grocers were considerably greater than those reported by the general stores, though, as appears in Table 5, the conditions are reversed in many sections of the country where the population is largely rural. Two of the commodities where the predominance of the retail grocer's stocks is most marked, it may be noted, are condensed and evaporated milk, which are commodities more extensively used in urban communities than in the country. On the other hand, commodities like corn meal and salt fish, which show larger stocks for the general stores than for the retail grocers, are commodities more widely used in rural sections than in the cities.

Table 4 gives comparative figures for July 1, 1918, and July 1, 1917, for retail stocks, for general stores, and for all stocks combined.

The percentages showing the relation between the 1917 stocks and the 1918 stocks form the most significant part of this table, and furnish a convenient basis for comparing the change in the retail stocks with the corresponding change in the stocks reported by commercial concerns other than retailers. The actual quantities reported should be considered also, however, in any such comparison, in order to avoid giving undue weight to a percentage based on a small part of the total stocks.

Table 5 gives the holdings reported by the several classes of retail dealers by geographic divisions, and Table 6 shows the total retail stocks reported for July 1, 1918, by states.

A study of the relative importance of retail stocks by geographic divisions and states, on the basis of the figures here published, taken in connection with those already published in previous issues of "Food Surveys," reveals many interesting facts and local conditions which are obscured when the figures are taken for the country as a whole.

* A number of commodities are omitted from this table, because the distribution of their retail stocks among the several classes of retailers was not significant. In the case of wheat, for example, practically all the retail stocks were held by retail grain dealers.
